KDD 2026 Datasets & Benchmarks Track Program

Dear Program Committee,

I am writing to confirm and enthusiastically support Paper "Agent-Didactic Spaces: A Cross-National Educational Benchmark for Multi-Objective Pathway Evaluation", the research conducted in collaboration with our team at CourseFactory.

CourseFactory.ai is an AI-powered platform for online course creation, having produced over 150 courses for Coursera with 3+ million learners. The challenge of balancing pedagogical integrity with market viability is a central, daily struggle in our industry. The ADS/MAPE framework directly addresses this core problem.

We facilitated a pilot user study that proceeded in two waves within our ongoing collaboration. The initial pilot engaged five of our key practitioners; as the framework matured and the collaboration deepened, the study was expanded to 13 practitioners in total, spanning instructional design, academic affairs, and product leadership roles within CourseFactory. Participation was voluntary. All participants provided informed consent prior to their session, and no personally identifiable information was retained in the research data beyond role-level descriptors.

Participants reported significantly higher decision confidence and found the Pareto-based trade-off visualization vastly more useful than traditional methods. Based on these positive outcomes, we are now exploring a broader integration of the ADS framework into our internal decision-making processes. We believe this research has significant potential for social impact by democratizing access to high-quality, data-informed instructional design.

We confirm that this collaboration was conducted at arm's length, with no financial relationship influencing the research outcomes. We are proud to have been a part of this work and believe it represents a meaningful contribution. We support this KDD'26 submission and confirm that the practitioner-study results described in the paper accurately reflect the outcomes of our collaboration.

Sincerely,
Taras Pustovoy, CEO CourseFactory Inc.
